palm oil-free

palm oil-free easter goodie guide

Palm oil can be listed as:

- Palm oil kernel
- Anything containing the words "Palmitate" or "Palmate"
- Elaeis guineensis
(Scientific name for palm oil)
- Hydrated Palm Glycerides
- Hexadecanoic or Palmitic Acid

Likely to be palm oil:

- Vegetable oil
- Anything containing the words "stearate, stearyl"
- Anything containing the words "cetyl, cetearyl"
- Sodium Lauryl Sulphate (SLS)
- Sodium Laureth Sulphate
- Sodium Dodecyl Sulphate (SDS or NaDS)
- Sodium Stearoyl Lactylate
- Calcium Stearoyl Lactylate
- Steareth -2 and Steareth -20
- Emulsifier 422, 430-436, 465-467, 470-478, 481-483, 493-495, 57

NOTE: The ingredients listed here are usually palm oil in origin, but not always. For example, vegetable oil can sometimes be palm oil, sometimes another type of oil. You can contact manufacturers of products to check. But if they cannot confirm either way, there is no guarantee that their products are palm oil-free.

This Palm Oil-Free Easter Goodie Guide contains a delicious range of Easter chocolate treats. These are all the products we have been able to research, and we've done everything we can to check that they are all palm oil-free. However, because there's no legal requirement for palm oil or its derivatives to be labelled on product packaging in New Zealand, it can be a challenge! And it's complex, with lots of derivatives listed differently. So if we've got anything wrong, please just let us know. Also, we'd love to know if you discover products you believe to be palm oil-free.
